参考 : 2020 年度講義内容 (内容は変更されることがあります)

The coronavirus has created its expansive impact on every aspect of life: health, employment, economy, entertainment, and family life among others. It has posed challenges not only to how people cope up with the virus while keeping up with their living on the daily basis. It has also challenged the governance ability of governments across the world which is constantly put to test given unpredictable developments of the virus. Compared with other continents, Asia has shown a more efficient management of the situation with a smaller number of infections and a slower spread of the virus. However, Asia couldn't avoid mounting challenges including the impacts on the economy, the disruptions to people's daily life, and the questionability of the style of governance.

Asia Workshop 2020 aims at providing a forum for students to expose themselves to the voices of professionals of different expertise, to the voices of local people in order to better understand how Asian countries have dealt with the situation and how people have adjusted their living to this new normalcy.

Topics for discussions include:

- Governments' responses and People's narratives
- Health Initiatives from Japan
- Local Voice from Wuhan
- Online world through the pandemic
- Closing and Reopening
- New Normalcy
- Environment Risks in the context of the pandemic
- Migrant workers
