Questionnaire for Graduating Master’s Students

First, please read [I] Purpose of the Questionnaire and [II] How to Answer and Submit the Questionnaire, then proceed with the questionnaire. We will take a questionnaire from December 2, 2019 through March 31, 2020.

[I] Purpose of the Questionnaire

The Graduate School of Science and Technology at Keio University has carried out various reforms in order to improve its quality of education. One of the reforms is the establishment of the current three schools’ system. Strong points should be strengthened further, and inadequacies should be changed and improved. These efforts are essential for educational institutions. One of the most effective means of reform is to collect frank opinions and forward-looking ideas from students who studied at the Graduate School of Science and Technology. This is why the Graduate School of Science and Technology carries out this questionnaire. This questionnaire differs from the Faculty Development (FD) survey in that the FD survey is about individual classes, whereas this questionnaire is about student life and courses overall. For example, the following facts have been shown multilaterally after analyzing past questionnaire results:

- There were many students who thought they had acquired the problem-solving and personal development skills by completing the Master’s program.
- Students had an awareness of their communication skills in English.
- There were various requests regarding themes and contents of classes and methods of instruction.

In light of these results, faculty members at the Graduate School of Science and Technology have been trying hard to improve the contents of guidance and the curriculum.

Of course, the results are only used for the purpose above. You may allow to enter this questionnaire through the recognition of keio.jp, however Keio University shall never identify individual respondents when analyzing results. Your cooperation is essential to make the Graduate School of Science and Technology at Keio University an educational institution to take pride in.
