Visa Information for Japan

Who Needs to Read This?

All applicants without a Status of Residence in Japan, excluding visas for short-term stay. If this applies to you, you must have a Certificate of Eligibility (COE) issued before applying for the appropriate visa (a "Student" visa). Keio University will act as proxy and apply for your COE at the Tokyo Immigration Bureau of the Ministry of Justice as long as you satisfy the following requirement:

- You do not have any Status of Residence in Japan at the time of enrollment into the Double Degree program, and require a COE in order to obtain a "Student" visa.

*Under Japanese Immigration Law, Japanese nationals, including those with dual nationalities, must enter Japan as a Japanese national with their Japanese passport.

<Important Notes>

- Those with short-term stay visas are not eligible to enroll into university.
- This does not apply to those who have a visa other than a short-term stay visa (such as "Long Term Resident", "Dependent," etc.), you do not need to undertake any procedures. For those, however, who wish to change their visa status to that of "Student," complete the "Application for Change of Status of Residence" procedure on your own. Note that Keio University does not apply on your behalf for a COE for Extension of Period of Stay, Change of Visa (Status of Residence), or visas other than a "Student" visa.
- If you fail to submit the required documents or submit incomplete documents, Keio University will not process your COE application.
- Once Keio University submits your COE application to the Immigration Bureau, it usually takes 1-2 months to process. It is not possible to accelerate this process and we also cannot check on its status. It is therefore critical to submit all of the required documents by the date mentioned above in order to guarantee issuance of your COE on time.
- The Immigration Bureau may request you to submit additional documents during the review process.
- Please note that there may be cases where a COE is not issued depending on the content of the documents submitted. In these cases, Keio University is not responsible if a COE is not issued.
- In case you decide to decline your enrollment into the Double Degree program after having received your COE, please return your COE immediately.
